Human rights in Wales date back to?

Multiple choice

- 1998 which was the year the Human Rights Act became law.
- 1948 when the Universal Declaration of Human Rights was written.
- 1215 when the Magna Carta was agreed.
- 945 when The Laws of Hywel Dda were published.

The latter part of his name ('Dda' or 'Good') refers to the fact that his laws were just and good, championing compassion rather than punishment, plenty of common sense and a sense of respect towards women. The other dates also signify important milestones in the development of human rights.

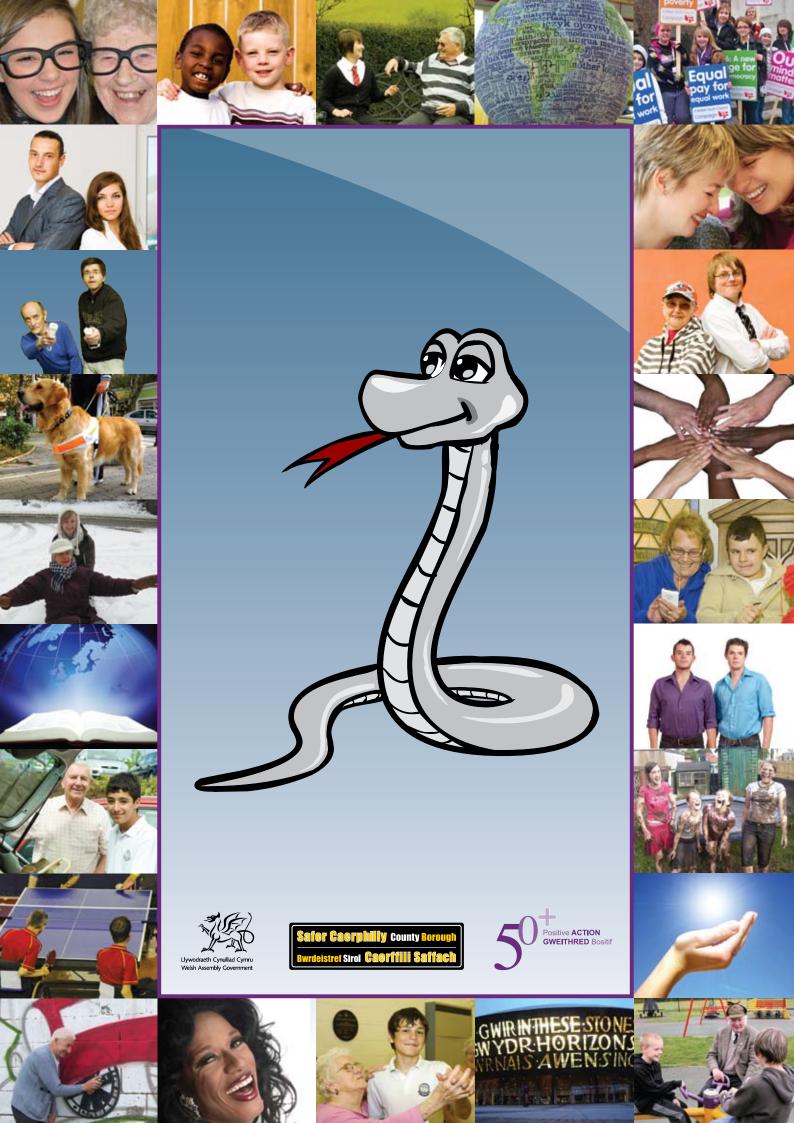

In the UK, who is protected by the Human Rights Act?

Multiple choice:

- Everyone who works for a government organisation, for example nurses, teachers and civil servants.
- Everyone who has the right to vote.
- Everyone, regardless of status.
- Everyone over the age of 18.
- Everyone.

The Human Rights Act applies to everyone regardless of their race, religion, gender, age, political views or any other status.

Rhys Jones works in the local council's housing department. He has received an application for a home from a woman who is experiencing domestic abuse. Rhys's manager has turned down her application, but Rhys is worried that the woman's human rights might be breached. What Articles might have been breached by the manager's decision?

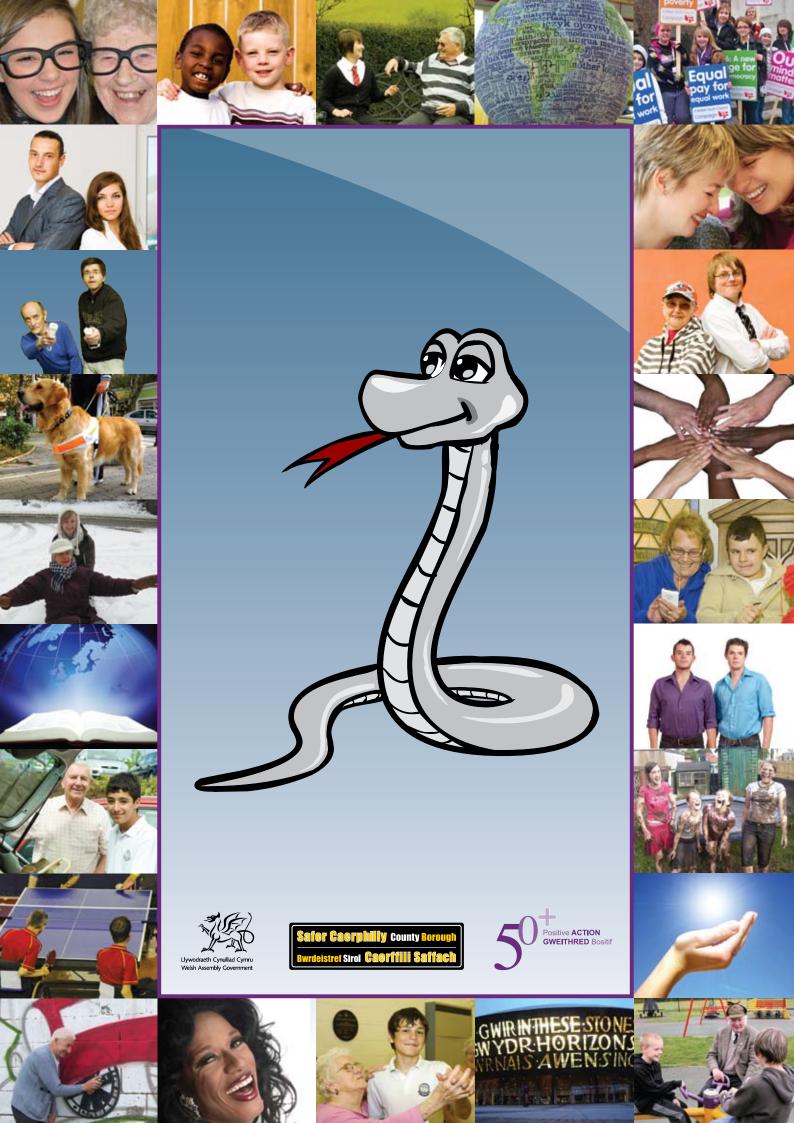

Multiple choice:

- None.
- Article 3 (Right not to be subjected to degrading treatment).
- Article 8 (Right to a private and family life).
- Article 3 and Article 8.

Article 3 and Article 8; even if the abuse is not being committed by the Local Authority, once they are aware of the potential breach, they must act to protect the individual.

Paul Chen's bully, David Smith, has been asked to formally apologise to Paul and several other pupils during the school assembly. David thinks this will be humiliating and in breach of Article 3 – the right not to be subjected to treatment or punishment that is degrading. Can the school ask him to do this?

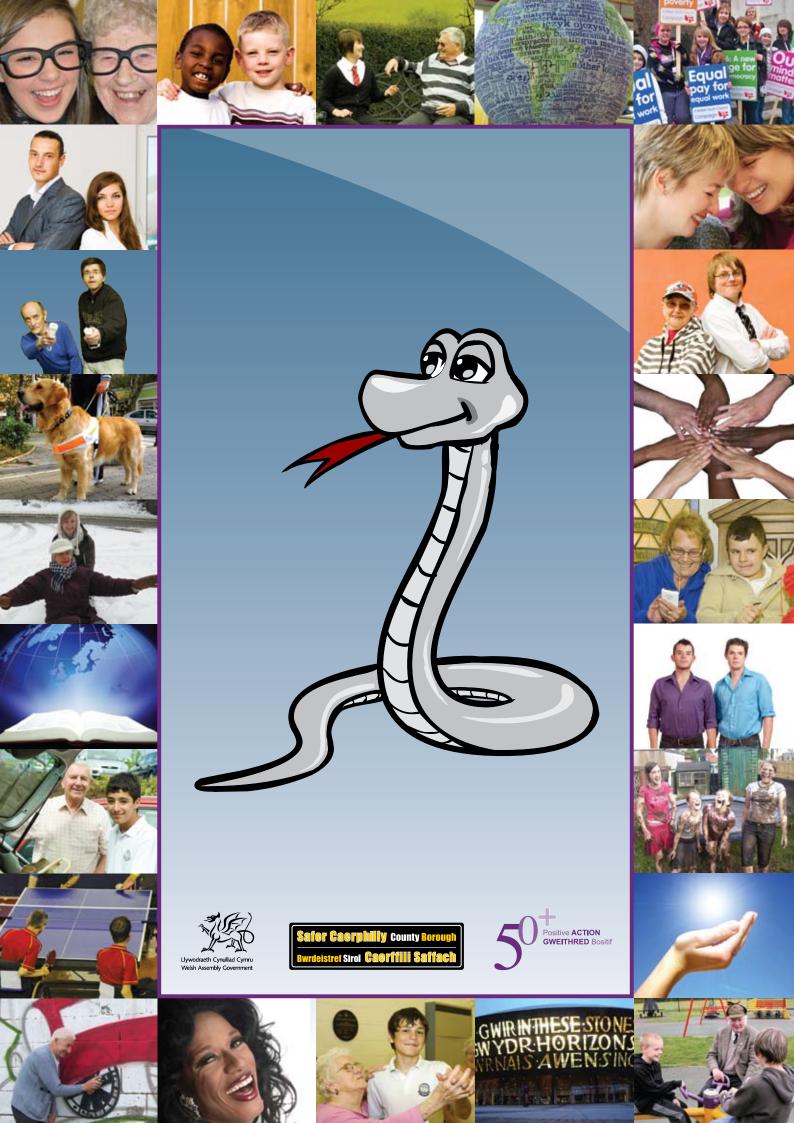

Multiple choice:

- Yes.
- Yes, but only with the consent of his parents or guardian.
- Yes, but only if the school is privately run
- No.

Yes. This is unlikely to be a breach of his rights under Article 3 as it is a necessary and a proportionate punishment. Whether or not treatment is "degrading" depends on whether a reasonable person of the same age, sex and health as you would have felt degraded.

In the care home where Donna Jones works, a new resident has arrived but is very distressed that his wife of 65 years wasn't given a place on grounds that she did not fit the criteria of the home. Donna is worried that the council may be in breach of Article 8, the right to a private and family life. Is she right?

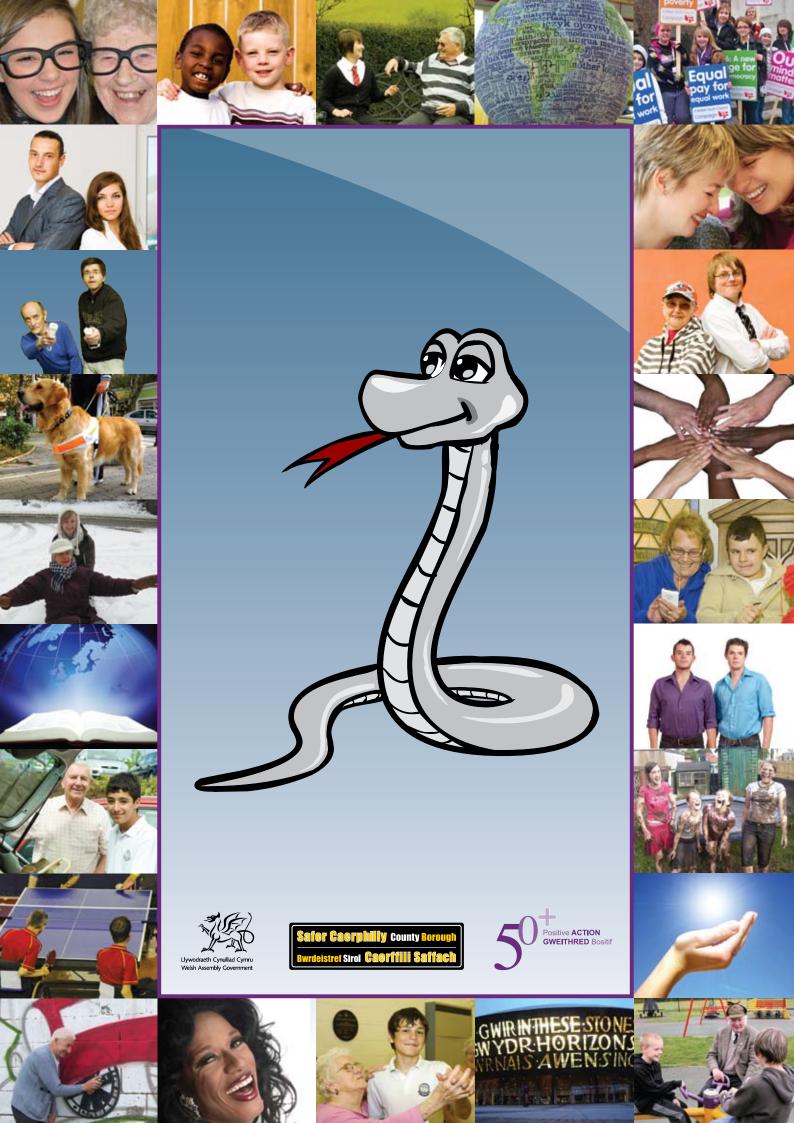

Multiple choice:

- No.
- Yes, and it is an absolute right.
- Yes, and it is a qualified right.
- Yes, and it is a limited right.

Yes, and it is a qualified right. The right to respect for private and family life (Article 8) is not an absolute human right. Instead it is a qualified right, meaning that you have to weigh up your rights with those of other individuals and/or the wider community.

What in Human rights law is the difference between an Absolute right, a Limited right and a Qualified right?

Absolute rights

These are rights of the European Convention on Human Rights that have been adopted fully.These rights are not limited and they cannot be infringed no matter how necessary it might seem to do so.The absolute rights are Articles 2, 3, 4 and 7.

Limited rights

Certain rights of the European Convention on Human Rights are limited in the UK for specific reasons. There is a right to liberty for instance, however this is not absolute as it must be limited by the powers of the police to arrest someone. The limited rights are Articles 5, 6 and 12.

Qualified rights

These are rights that could be infringed upon if there is a specific legitimate aim - in interests of national security, public safety etc. The infringement must be properly regulated by the law and must be necessary in a democratic society. This latter concept means the interference with the right must be a proportionate response to the legitimate aim. If the aim can be achieved by a less intrusive method then that method must be used instead. The qualified rights are Articles 8, 9, 10, 11, 14 and Protocol 1 Article 1.
