

Bedwas Junior School – World’s Biggest Lesson

141 pupils took part in a lesson that was also being taught to millions around the world.

Councilor Angus Donaldson came in and visited all the classes. We all learnt about the importance of education and lack of education globally. We completed mind maps of what makes a good education and why some children miss out.

Councilor Donaldson was really impressed by what was going on and said that he was delighted with the pupils responses and was glad they were knew what made a good education.

Each class made posters to send to our local MP reminding him of the promise made that the 72 children who currently miss out on school will be able to go by 2015. One of the year 6 classes even wrote a letter to send to Wayne David and some pupils emailed contacts the school have in Africa.

The lesson took place at the world record official time of 9am and lasted an hour. I have now sent all the pupils names and the record sheet to Global act for education charity so we should now get included in the Guinness book of records.
