The registration of electors and the conduct of elections is governed by the Representation of the People Act 1983 as amended. Under Section 8 of the Act, local Councils must appoint an Electoral Registration Officer / Returning Officer, the appointments are separate to any other appointment by the Council and the duties are personal to that post. The Electoral Registration Officer does not carry out the duties on behalf of the local authority but in his own personal capacity.

The Electoral Registration Officer / Returning Officer and staff carrying out duties on behalf of these are referred to as Electoral Services in this Privacy Notice.

Service / Work Area:	Electoral Services
Contact Details:	David Beecham - Electoral Services Manager Tel: 01443 864405 Email: electoralservices@caerphilly.gov.uk
Privacy Notice Name:	Electoral Services
Description of Privacy Notice:	This Privacy Notice will explain how Electoral Services will use your information including who your information will be shared with.

How we will use your information

Source and type of information being processed

The majority of personal data held/used by Electoral Services would have been obtained directly from the individual. However Electoral Services are allowed to access Council records in order to help maintain the register of electors (Section 9A of the Representation of the People Act 1983).

Below we will explain what categories of information may be obtained and the specific source of that information.

Categories / Source of personal data obtained

The information detailed below would be obtained from Caerphilly Borough Council.

- Property Address Details – source of information would include property gazetteer
- Name and Address of Electors – source of information would include Council Tax

Your Obligations

You have an obligation to provide the following information

There is a statutory obligation for you to provide the information requested on the annual canvass of properties which is detailed below:

Section 9 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 requires Electoral Services to maintain a register of electors whilst Section 10 requires Electoral Services to carry out an annual canvass of properties.

Consequences of not providing the information requested

Regulation 23 of the Representation of the People Regulations makes it an offence not to comply with a request for information from Electoral Services – maximum £1,000 fine or £5,000 or six month imprisonment if false information provided.

Purpose and legal basis for using your information

Purpose of processing

Your name and address will form part of the electoral register and your date of birth will be held (not on the register) to ensure you are over 18 for voting purposes and under 76 for exemption from Jury service. Additionally your nationality is held to enable Electoral Services to allow you to vote at the elections you are entitled to.

National Insurance numbers are required by Electoral Services in order to carry out an identity check with Department of Works and Pension (DWP). These are not retained following your registration.

If you are an absent voter (postal or proxy) Electoral Services must also keep a copy of your signature and date of birth in order to check these identifiers against your postal vote.

Electoral Services will also process information from election candidates and their agents.

Electoral Services will give you the option to provide an email address or telephone number. This will only be used if you need to be contacted about your registration – it will never be shared. You may ask for these to be removed from our records at any time.

Electoral Services will process your data in order to publish both a full and open access electoral register and in order to manage elections.

You may opt out of the open access register at any time. This register can be bought by any person and used for any purpose (e.g. by charities and businesses for marketing). The full register is only available for inspection (people may make hand written notes from it) at the Electoral Services office and what that information can be used for is limited by law.

For an explanation of the full and edited registers see appendix 1.

Legal basis for processing

There is a statutory obligation to process your information detailed below:

Section 9 of the Representation of the People Act 1983 requires Electoral Services to maintain a register of electors and Regulation 93 of the Representation of the People Regulations requires the publication of a second 'open access' register. Regulation 26 of the Regulations allows Electoral Services to process National Insurance numbers and dates of birth.

The Representation of the People Act (Section 23) requires Electoral Services to administer parliamentary elections.

In order for the processing of personal data to be lawful under the General Data Protection Regulations 2016, a valid condition from Article 6 of the Regulations must be identified, which is outlined below:

1c. processing is necessary for compliance with a legal obligation to which the controller is subject;

Appendix 1

There are two registers. Why?

Using information received from the public, registration officers keep two registers – the electoral register and the open register (also known as the edited register).

The electoral register lists the names and addresses of everyone who is registered to vote in public elections. The register is used for electoral purposes, such as making sure only eligible people can vote. It is also used for other limited purposes specified in law, such as:

- detecting crime (e.g. fraud)
- calling people for jury service
- checking credit applications.

The open register is an extract of the electoral register, but is not used for elections. It can be bought by any person, company or organisation. For example, it is used by businesses and charities to confirm name and address details. Your name and address will be included in the open register unless you ask for them to be removed. Removing your details from the open register does not affect your right to vote.
